Philly company is brains of 'Full House' reunion

Viral. A Philadelphia creative network is behind the Super Bowl ad that's blowing up days before the game even airs.

It's simple, yet so complicated. That's what makes it brilliant.

In a teaser for an upcoming Super Bowl ad for Dannon's Oikos Greek yogurt, the actors who once portrayed Danny Tanner (Bob Saget), his brother-in-law Jesse (John Stamos) and their best friend Joey (Dave Coulier) on "Full House" enjoy a cup of the yogurt before musing that they should probably get separate homes.

It's like a look-in on the lives of the characters 20 years later.

The concept originated in Philadelphia with local company Poptent and was crowdsourced by a team of creative minds.

"At Poptent, our network of independent filmmakers is actually creating all of the video and films you see," explained Liz MacDonald, Poptent's director of client services, who was the point person on the Dannon project.

Poptent previously worked on a 2012 Super Bowl commercial for Dannon, the first Super Bowl commercial for a yogurt. But this ad is attracting even more attention.

"I can't even put it in words. This is what we've been working for," MacDonald said of the interest the spot is drawing before even airing. "This is why we have developed the product that we have to enable this kind of really great stuff to be created in an innovative and interesting way, something that has a really great story behind it."

While the ad was produced for Dannon by Vinizius/Y&R, Poptent's unique network did the creative labor.

"It's unlike anything else out there," MacDonald said of Poptent's creative team, who hatch ideas before budgets and reality kick in.

"They don't have to work within any confines at all," MacDonald said.

Masterminding the video

Poptent's spot keys in on multiple cultural trends:

- 1990s nostalgia: "Full House" was the crown jewel of ABC's "TGIF" Friday-night lineup.
- Bromance humor: The trio of males, most of whom paired up with women by the sitcom's 1995 finale, are back to sharing a house, sans the Tanner girls, Comet and annoying neighbor Kimmy Gibbler.
- Greek yogurt as an option for healthy snacking.

Funding. Gov. calls for hike for domestic violence programs

Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Corbett on Wednesday announced plans to funnel more state funding toward domestic violence prevention programs, including a sexual violence hotline.

"Governor Corbett understands the importance of ensuring that we meet the needs of crime victims and that we do everything in our power to prevent these horrific crimes from taking place," said Pennsylvania's Victim Advocate Jennifer Storm in a statement announcing the plan.

The $2.2 million represents a 10 percent increase in funding. Domestic violence funding would bump up from its present level of $13.9 to $15.3 million in state funding.

In addition to a 24/7 hotline and victim advocacy programs, the funding would support emergency shelters and financial aid.

Double hit

Store robbed twice in a day

A convenience store at a Bristol Township gas station was robbed twice in less than 11 hours earlier this week.

The first robbery at the Exxon Mobil minimarket on the 5300 block of New Falls Road was at 7:55 p.m. on Jan. 19, while the second was at 6:50 a.m. the next day.

Police are searching for multiple suspects.

Millennials may not stay here for long, report says

Young'uns. Millennials make up about a fourth of the population, which is in line with other big cities.

Where are the Millennials?

Millennials inhabit Center City and its surrounding neighborhoods, which include:

- Northern Liberties and Spring Garden
- University City
- Kensington and Fishtown
- The northern half of South Philadelphia

By the numbers

100K

Increase in population of 20- to 34-year-olds from 2006 to 2012

26%

As a result of the increase, Millennials make up about 26 percent of the city's population. It was 20 percent in 2006.

The "Great Millennial Migration" into the inner-city streets of Philadelphia is strong, but not permanent, a new report suggests.

The PEW Charitable Trust, a research initiative, released a report Tuesday that examines the size of Philadelphia's so-called Millennial population and their education level, location and attitudes about the city.

The report shows that since 2006, the city has seen a significant increase in the amount of young people between the ages of 20 and 34 years old who inhabit the city.

But the report calls the population — which typically flocks to Manayunk, Roxborough, East Falls and the Kensington and Fishtown areas — "fragile."

According to surveys and focus groups Pew conducted with young adults living in the city, more than half of them surveyed said they definitely or probably would leave Philadelphia within the next five to 10 years.

The reasons: overall lack of career opportunities, crime, public safety, cleanliness and the quality of public education.

According to the report, 36 percent of the Millennials surveyed would recommend Philadelphia as a place to raise children, while 56 percent said they would not.

"The strong growth in the population of young adults in Philadelphia offers promise for the future vitality of the city," said Larry Eichel, director of Pew's Philadelphia research initiative and the author of the report, in a news release.

"However, our research highlights that many Millennials are poised to leave," he said.

Eichel raises a key rhetorical question: How does the city keep young adults here, and convince them to set down roots?

New financial help center opens today

Bank on it. It's part of the People's Emergency Center and is in line with Obama's "Promise Zone."

The People's Emergency Center has been serving needy families in West Philadelphia and beyond, helping them with job training, housing, counseling and more.

It was the realization that more financial advice was needed for these families, and today, the Financial Opportunity Center officially opens.

The new center, through the PEC, will help residents improve their finances through education, coaching, job placement programs and more.

"We're helping people break through that financial barrier," said Farah Jimenez, PEC president and CEO. "Some of these people never had a bank account. We help them remove their fears."

Today, at 10:30 a.m., PEC and other community partners and residents are participating in a Employer Resource Fair at 3750 Lancaster Ave. for a "rocket launch" signifying opportunities for residents to launch their careers at the new Financial Opportunity Center.

Analysis

What the 'Promise Zone' means for Mantua

All of this comes right after President Barack Obama's announcement that the Mantua neighborhood in West Philadelphia is now a "Promise Zone" — one of five communities in the United States selected to be eligible for resources that help cut through red tape.

This doesn't necessarily mean aid money but it gives these neighborhoods an extra boost when applying for community grants.

"One of the key goals in the Promise Zone," Jimenez said, "is to increase employment and job opportunity."

Quoted

"How we collaborate means we can share with people more. We're looking to do much more coordination in terms of marketing in the neighborhood." Jimenez

Suspect robbed 7-Eleven with BB gun

A 21-year-old Newark, Del., man was arrested underneath a house deck shortly after he allegedly robbed a convenience store Tuesday night with a BB gun, police said.

Hampton J. Jones walked into the 7-Eleven, on the 600 block of East Chestnut Hill Road, around 10 p.m. Tuesday wearing a mask and brandishing the gun, Delaware State Police said.

Jones pointed the gun at a 41-year-old man, standing near the cashier counter, and the clerk, a 30-year-old woman.

Hampton J. Jones / DSP

Jones briefly struggled with the man, and then demanded the clerk to empty the register. The clerk turned over an unknown amount of cash and Jones fled the store.

Jones was spotted by a New Castle County Police officer walking a few blocks from the store. He dashed away and led police on a brief foot chase. He was eventually discovered hiding underneath the deck of a nearby home and was arrested, police said.

Jones was charged with two counts of first-degree robbery and one count of wearing a disguise during the commission of a felony.

He was released after posting a $22,200 secured bail.

No injuries were reported. METRO

Infrared heat warms in a way similar to the warmth we feel from the sun, it's been described by many as "bone warming" heat. It is completely safe and does not deplete oxygen from the air, which would make you tired, nor dry out the air, which irritates your skin. The iHeater brand is said to be the most sought after brand of infrared heaters, and now they have a space saving plug-in infrared heater, the iHeater Mini500. They also have in-house customer service located in Indianapolis, Indiana. The iHeater infrared heating elements are backed by a lifetime warranty and don't burn out, like other low-end brands of infrared heaters that use bulbs.

Infrared heaters of this quality are expensive, the suggested retail on this unit is $199.95, but state residents are being urged to call the Toll Free hotlines at 1-800-341-7959 because the first 362 callers who beat the 48-hour deadline will be able to claim one of these infrared iHeaters and have it delivered directly to their door for only $99.95 and the shipping is free. Gov. Christie's NJ approval rating drops

Dip. The poll of 826 New Jersey adults was conducted from Jan. 14 to Jan. 19.

Support for New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie, which soared over his handling of superstorm Sandy, has fallen almost 20 points since his landslide re-election in November as he faces probes into the conduct of a top aide who allegedly ordered a politically motivated traffic jam.

Christie's approval rating among New Jersey voters, at 65 percent just before he was re-elected last year, dipped to 46 percent favorable to 43 percent unfavorable, according to the Rutgers-Eagleton Poll.

In the heavily Democratic state, support for Christie remains high among Republicans and independents, while support fell 26 points among Democrats.

The poll was partly complete when new allegations were brought last week by the Democratic Mayor of Hoboken that Christie withheld storm recovery funds for political reasons. REUTERS

Bitter cold lingers as northeast digs out

The northeastern United States on Wednesday was digging out from a deadly storm that dumped more than 15 inches of snow in some places, with gusting winds and frigid temperatures closing some schools and offices and delaying or canceling thousands of flights. At least one death was blamed on the storm, which made roads treacherous throughout the region, including near Emmitsburg, Maryland, where a driver lost control and slammed into a tractor trailer, Maryland State Police reported. Temperatures were below 10 degrees Fahrenheit across much of the New York metropolitan area, according to the National Weather Service. REUTERS

More ways to vote

US panel recommends ways to cut election day wait times

To reduce long election day voting lines, a presidential panel recommended that states explore the possibility of expanding ways that Americans can vote early, an increasingly popular way to vote.

Complaints about long lines in the 2012 presidential election prompted President Barack Obama to form a bipartisan commission to look at ways to improve the voting experience.

The Presidential Commission on Election Administration, led by Obama's 2012 campaign lawyer and Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney's top attorney, made its recommendations Wednesday. REUTERS

Today in celebrities behaving badly

YOUNG JEEZY

BRUCE DERN

SOULJA BOY

It's been quite the week for many celebrities — and it's not because they are doing God's work.

First up: Young Jeezy, who was thrown in the slammer on Monday after his girlfriend pulled the panic alarm at her Alpharetta, Ga., home, according to TMZ. When cops showed up, Jeezy didn't identify himself and was abusive when they tried to figure out what he was doing there. So, as it happens, he was arrested.

Meanwhile, Soulja Boy was busted with a loaded gun in Los Angeles on Wednesday morning. Cops pulled over the car he was riding in after running a stop sign, they saw the gun and arrested the rapper.

And finally, Bruce Dern is currently not in Quentin Tarantino's good graces after he (or his representatives) apparently leaked a new script of the director's. "I finished a script, a first draft, and I didn't mean to shoot it until next winter," Tarantino told Deadline about the script for "The Hateful Eight." "I gave it to six people, and apparently it's gotten out."

Lawrence wasn't the first choice for 'Silver Linings Playbook'

In "Silver Linings Playbook," Jennifer Lawrence played a woman who'd gotten married, been widowed, gone crazy with grief and slept her way out of at least one job. Believe it or not, the first choice to play that role was not a 21-year-old.

Harvey Weinstein recently revealed that a different pixie-cut thespian was originally slated for the role: Anne Hathaway was his original choice to play Tiffany. "'Silver Linings Playbook' was originally going to be with Anne Hathaway and Mark Wahlberg," the studio exec told Howard Stern. "And then Anne wasn't doing it. And she's marvelous and wonderful and she was my choice, I love her."

So why wasn't Hathaway up there yelling and twitching and dancing poorly? Apparently she and director David O. Russell didn't hit it off. "David and Anne had some creative differences," Weinstein said. "They didn't see eye to eye."

That's no shocker — David O. Russell is famously difficult to work with. And since both she and Lawrence won Oscars that year, she's probably cool with how things worked out. Of course, Lawrence won Best Actress, while Hathaway nabbed a mere Best Supporting Actress statuette for "Les Miserables."

So, yeah, she might not be grinding her teeth at night over this one.

LONG LIVE THE SCREWUP

"Rake" premieres tonight at 9 on Fox. / FOX VIA GETTY IMAGES

TV. Greg Kinnear plays a lovable "Rake" in Fox's new comedy.

Keegan Deane is that one friend we all have who just can't get his act together. He's the lovable screwup; and now, he's the star of Fox's "Rake."

Portrayed by Greg Kinnear, Deane owes nearly $60,000 to his bookie, has been crashing at his best friend's house for four months and is in love with a prostitute who views their relationship as a business transaction. He's a narcissist in denial, but he's also a brilliant defense attorney who is incredibly charming (even if he's not very good at getting paid for his work).

"I don't think he has a great self-awareness of [his problems]," Kinnear says of his character. "It comes in fits and starts. There are moments where he has a little bit of reflection about where he's at on the map, but certainly, you know, out of the gate, very little."

Deane's ego — and his utter lack of interest in adhering to normal societal standards — drew Kinnear to the series, which is based on an Australian show of the same name. "I was intrigued immediately when I saw the mess of that guy," he says. "That kind of absolute lack of need for approval is a hugely attractive thing, especially if you're an actor. Getting to play that and getting to pursue a guy who's not necessarily interested in what you think was a really cool element for me."

That's a good thing, because Deane's clients in upcoming episodes will include a serial killer and a cannibal — not your typical underdog stories. And yet, "Rake" finds a way to make the audience root for the antihero. Kinnear chalks it up to the show's fine-tuned ability to weave comedy into dramatic storylines.

"It's tricky to try and find that comedic/drama balance," he says. "But the Australian show succeeds very, very much in that. It really struck a nice chord between the drama and the comedy, which is what appealed to me."

AMBER M. RAY

Character flaws

Too edgy?

Producer Peter Tolan knows a thing or two about flawed characters: He created the FX drama "Rescue Me," about post-9/11 NYC firefighters. In introducing "Rake" to U.S. viewers, the TV veteran needed abrasive Deane to still be likable. Tolan says his writers actually pulled back on some of the more outlandish antics from the original series "to get an audience comfortable with a guy who's this much of a f—up and to care about him." That's why they reshot the pilot. The original, which featured Deane defending a cannibal, was held for later this season, after viewers have had a chance to warm up to the mess of a protagonist.

2 'The Past' Asghar Farhadi's Iranian drama "A Separation" was, deservedly, a ridiculously huge success. His follow-up takes him to France and bigger stars (Berenice Bejo, "A Prophet"'s Tahar Ramin), who play a couple dealing with the latter's comatose wife.

3 'Ride Along' Surely the Ice Cube circa "Straight Outta Compton" always imagined he'd be doing little else but playing cops. Here, the ex-N.W.A member decides to torture the diminutive, motormouth wannabe-officer (Kevin Hart) who wants to marry his sister.

4 'Jack Ryan: Shadow Recruit' One of the Cold War's most reliable do-gooders — created by Tom Clancy — returns with this reboot, in which the CIA man (Chris Pine) battles Russians. Wait: Russians? What era is this?

5 'The Nut Job' Will Arnett headlines this heist 'toon, voicing a loner squirrel who learns the value of sharing when the fellow animals of an urban park find themselves short on food for the winter.

6 'The Invisible Woman' Ralph Fiennes directs and stars in this drama as Charles Dickens who, as it happened, took a secret mistress: Nelly Ternan (Felicity Jones), a poor, young, artistically minded woman some 25 years his junior.

7 'Lone Survivor' Based on true events, Mark Wahlberg heads up a sparse cast of four SEALs who get ambushed on a mission in Taliban-run Afghanistan. The title's a bit of a spoiler

8 'Her' Spike Jonze returns with the tale of a lonely divorcee (Joaquin Phoenix) who falls in love with his new, self-aware operating system (voiced by Scarlett Johansson).

9 'American Hustle' An absurdly powerful cast — Christian Bale and Jennifer Lawrence, among them — tell of the larger-than-life Abscam FBI operation of the '70s.

'I, Frankenstein'

The old Universal horror movies used to resurrect Frankenstein's monster all the time, so technically it's not egregious that this Australian-American contraption awakens him in a dystopian future. That he's now named Adam and fights gargoyles is another kettle of fish.

Look, it's a demon in a suit! Such sights await you in "I, Frankenstein." / BEN KING

Grouper. Fun (and love) for everyone

Let Challen Hodson direct your date. / PROVIDED

Challen Hodson is the director of membership experience for Grouper, an online social club that matches groups of three female friends with groups of three male friends. Members of Grouper receive reminder texts and confirmation emails from Hodson and can text her back with questions or requests. But don't confuse her with Siri: Challen is the real deal, staying up late to read texts and giving advice on how to move forward if your Grouper is going well.

We asked Challen to give us dating tips, meeting new people and what it's like to be one of the most important new influences on the dating scene.

Is it really you who answers all of these texts?
Yes, it's really me! We have a number of concierges around the country, so there are many people speaking in different cities, but it's me in New York.

What are your hours like?
We might get a text from someone two-and-a-half hours into their Grouper because they're going to karaoke and they're asking us which first song they should sing. We start later in the morning and roll through midnight on nights when it's needed.

What's the craziest text you've received?
I did receive one where the group said, "Challen, throw some luck our way, we're going to Atlantic City." I said, "Are you serious?"

ANDREA PARK

Q&A

What's the latest time at which you've responded to a text?
Probably 3:30 a.m. But that's not very often.

BREAK THE BAD HABITS, BOO

Old habits die hard. But if your love life isn't quite what you want it to be, you've gotta switch it up. Get out of your dating rut, get a new strategy and ditch these habits once and for all!

Getting out when it's not working can be sad, but it's also powerful.
COLOURBOX

1 Making excuses. Are you always making up reasons to not try your hardest when it comes to dating? Maybe some of these sound familiar: "I'm not going to find someone online anyway." "I'm not going to date until I lose weight." "I'm doing pretty well on my own right now." Stop talking yourself out of taking the necessary steps to find someone. Admit to yourself you want a relationship, if that's what you want. Make the commitment to try finding one, and be proactive about meeting people.

2 Being too judgmental. Of course when you're meeting people, you have to be a little picky. But whether you're deciding who to talk to at a bar or whose messages to respond to online, don't pick people apart and discount them based on one feature you're not that into — physical or otherwise. You have to give people a chance to win you over with the full package.

3 Staying in a relationship that's going nowhere. Breakups are no fun. But you can't stay in a relationship that isn't right just because you don't want to deal with a breakup, are scared of being alone, or things feel comfortable. You deserve to be with someone who really makes you happy, and so does your partner. If you haven't found the right one, get back out there and try again.

4 Taking your relationship for granted. Relationships have to be nourished and protected no matter how long you've been in one. Regularly schedule a date night where you get out of the house and do something different with each other. Even when you're busy and exhausted, make time to talk to one another about your days and share the things that are on your mind. Yes, it's easier to get home from work and plop yourself on the couch in front of your favorite TV shows. But just like you have to put effort into working out regularly to stay in shape, you have to put effort into your relationship even when things are going well.

Votre Vu Duette

Thanks to winter's frigid temps, cold air and central heating, our lips are constantly chapped and our hands are dry, flaky and susceptible to paper cuts. This means schlepping around various moisturizers and lip balms in addition to the scarf, gloves and hat (and since we're in round two of the polar vortex fun, perhaps a ski mask) in our already-stuffed bag. Enter Votre Vu's new Duette. The all-natural French beauty brand combined a nourishing lip balm (made from coconut oil, shea butter and beeswax) and luxe hand cream (sunflower, grape seed, jojoba oils and aloe) in one neatly packaged tube to make staying moisturized on-the-go so much more convenient.

‘Switch over to the dark side’

Trend. Bartenders agree: More women are eschewing “girly” cocktails in favor of whiskey.

Fado’s Maple Manhattan
PROVIDED

Warm up with an Irish whiskey. / PROVIDED

Hold the cosmo. Women want whiskey.

“Women look cool when they order whiskey,” says Chelsea McNett, bartender at Fado Irish Pub on 15th and Locust. “It’s sophisticated. Whiskey is on a higher pedestal — it’s the caviar of alcohol.”

That’s the theme of our conversation with the bartenders and assistant GM at Fado, with this refrain: A woman who orders whiskey “has balls.” And while the assembled drink experts acknowledge that the trend of more females drinking whiskey comes from the top down, with companies targeting women to expand their market — and from the simultaneous resurgence of “classic cocktails,” courtesy of “Mad Men” — at the end of the day, whiskey is just damn good.

“I never put anything into it — I don’t want to ruin it,” says bartender Daryl McCallion in his Irish accent. “But if you give it water or ice, it can open up aromas and flavors. There’s a complexity to the quality and texture and flavor.”

Of course, the average drinker isn’t going to understand that complexity as well as a professional drink-slinger. But that’s part of the coolness factor: There’s a lot more to learn about the different types of whiskey than there is for, say, vodka, which makes the spirit more intriguing and exclusive — it’s all very hipster. “There’s a social currency to it,” McNett says. “You can be an expert and school your friends.”

Quoted

Daryl McCallion, Fado bartender

And if you’re a woman who doesn’t know much about whiskey, the other bartenders chime in, that’s OK — women don’t have to worry about feeling emasculated, because they’re not conventially expected to be whiskey experts.

Vincent Stipo, beverage manager at Vernick Food & Drink (2031 Walnut St.), says he’s seen more women trying “brown spirits” — but in a place like Vernick, it’s more about trusting your bartender. “It can be a little challenging to get ladies who have been drinking sauvignon blancs and cosmos to ... switch over to the dark side,” Stipo says. “But I do definitely see more women being open to it, and letting us introduce new drinks to them.”

Flavored

Bubble gum

Vernick doesn’t have any vodka cocktails printed on its drink menu — especially not the flavored vodkas marketed toward women. And the crew at Fado says it’s Fireball Cinnamon Whiskey that’s been flying off the shelves instead.

“Vodka flooded the market,” says Brenden Kisiel, assistant GM at Fado. “There are too many options — cotton candy-flavored, bubble gum. It cheapened the spirit. There’s a shift away from that.”

Marrying Jewish and Italian cooking

Hot chef. Laura Frangiosa pulls from her and her husband's backgrounds at their Lansdowne deli.

Laura Frangiosa really loves herbs — she has them tattooed on her shoulder. / ASHTON BRIDGES

Last summer chef Laura Frangiosa and her husband, Josh Skaroff, opened Avenue Delicatessen in Lansdowne. Frangiosa drew from her Italian heritage and her husband's Jewish background — two cultures that love to feed you — and reimagined the typical deli combo platter. And it worked: Avenue Delicatessen has been well received by locals and food critics alike for creatively pairing the cuisines.

How did you figure out that Jewish and Italian foods would work together so well?
Well, when I envision an Italian family and a Jewish family, there's always an abundance of food. Forget about Italian and Jewish, we all want some comfort food. When it comes to Jewish delis and Italian delis, we got 'em in spades in Philly. New York and Chicago and any metropolis has that. We wanted to do both and offer a marriage of the two. So we make Jewish wedding soup, for instance. It's one of our signature dishes because it combines the two. It's Italian wedding with no pasta. We use matzo instead. And we make a Reuben arancini, which is a traditional Italian dish but with all the ingredients of a Reuben inside.

You've worked in pretty much every position within a restaurant, including sales. Which was your favorite?
I loved being a bartender. I was always in the food business. At 14 I was working at a bakery, then a deli in Suburban Square. My first restaurant job was at a place called Frangelica, which is now Tabu. I worked there for a while in college. I loved bartending in the Gayborhood. Then I moved on to a couple of other things — a server, then sales. I was always around food. I worked for Samuel and Sons Seafood for a long time; that was a great job. I loved working with the chefs and helping them figure out the right thing for their menu. That's how I reconnected with [chef] Peter Woosley. He and I have known each other since we were 15 or 16 years old. When I found out that he was the opening Bistrot La Minette, I knew I wanted that account.

And then you started working with him, right?
We were talking one day and I said to him that I screwed up. I said I should have been a line cook, I should have gone to school for that. And he said, 'Maybe you want to work for me?' A few months later I worked for him. I was like a sponge and I tried to learn everything I could while I was there. I felt as if I was really thriving there, and really enjoying it.

JULIA WEST

Fresh herbs

Do you have a favorite ingredient to work with?
It's vague, but I love herbs. I use a multitude of herbs in almost everything I cook. I have a tattoo of herbs on my shoulder, and I always have at least, like, seven different kinds of fresh herbs in the restaurant. But never dried herbs.

A life worth giving

Wednesday's March for Life reminds us yet again that, despite the prevailing opinions of the media elite, millions of Americans are not ready to concede that unborn children have no civil rights. Through the cloud of inflammatory rhetoric about a "war on women" and "right-wing extremism," the basic question at play continues to be obscured: When does life begin and what right do we have to deprive the most basic human right to the smallest of our citizens?

Jersey justice

Re: 'Give no credit to Christie' (Metro, Jan. 22) Letter writer Joseph Connell's criticism of Governor Christie makes it obvious he has never managed a staff. It's literally impossible to monitor everything your staff does. It appears that a staff member, who thought she was doing something clever that her boss would appreciate, started the whole mess. I am not a fan of Governor Christie, but he deserves justice. There is no evidence whatsoever that he requested or desired the action taken by the staff member.

Most memorable wacky weather sports moments

Nearly a foot of snow blanketed downtown Philadelphia early this week and postponed a Flyers game in the process. Here is a look at some memorable moments caused by wacky weather in Philly sports history.

Phillies
TONIGHT'S PHILLIES/RAYS GAME HAS BEEN SUSPENDED.
RESUMPTION OF PLAY WILL BE DETERMINED WHEN WEATHER CONDITIONS ALLOW, EARLIEST TOMORROW AT 8 PM.
ALL FANS SHOULD HOLD ON TO THEIR TICKETS FOR TONIGHT. TICKETS WILL BE VALID FOR RE-ENTRY WHEN THE GAME IS RESUMED.

1 Phillies World Series Game 5

Though the game would go on to be the clincher for the city's first major sports championship in 25 years, at the time, it was pretty controversial.

With rain pouring down in Citizens Bank Park, MLB commissioner Bud Selig waited until the Rays, aided by dreary weather, came back to tie the game at two apiece with the Phillies before suspending the game indefinitely.

When play resumed, Pedro Feliz knocked in Eric Bruntlett to give the Phillies the 4-3 lead. Then Brad Lidge slammed the door shut striking out Eric Hinske to finish up the World Series title and unleash a party on Broad Street.

2 Eagles fall in Fog Bowl

Yes, it was a losing effort that saw the Eagles fall to the Bears 20-12 on Dec. 31, 1988, but the game has gone down as one of the wackiest football games in NFL history. Visibility was only about 15-20 yards at best, and cameras could barely record the action on the field as Buddy Ryan's squad fell to Mike Ditka's.

3 McCoy, Eagles dominate Lions

An instant classic, LeSean McCoy set an Eagles record with 217 rushing yards and the team scored 28 fourth-quarter points to come back and beat the Bears in a blizzard last month.

4 Roof blown off

Strong winds blew off the roof of the Spectrum in March 1968, forcing the Flyers to play a month of games on the road.

5 It's Tuesday night

A massive 2010 blizzard forced the first Tuesday night NFL game in decades. The Eagles fell to the Vikings 48-30.

6 Bounty Bowl II

Eagles fans used snowballs to back up coach Buddy Ryan against the Cowboys in this 1989 Eagles victory.

7 Bad Santa

In a moment that has gone down in Philly sports infamy, Eagles fans threw snowballs at Santa in a 1968 game.

8 Snowy NLDS

Tied 1-1, snow in Denver postponed the 2009 NLDS between the Phillies and Rockies.

9 76ers snow day

The legendary blizzard of 1996 caused a Sixers/Magic game at the Spectrum to be postponed.

3 SPORTS

Back in town

Abreu officially returns to Phillies

Needing a little more offense, Reuben Amaro Jr. and the Phillies will welcome back former Phillies All-Star outfielder Bobby Abreu. The lefty signed a one-year minor league deal possibly worth $800,000.

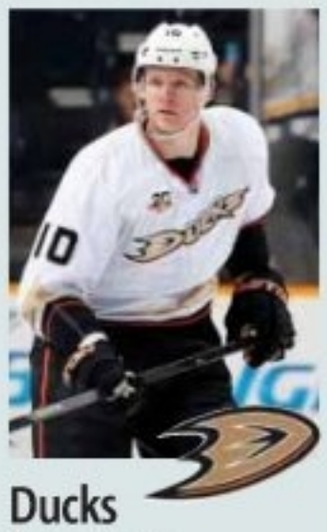
DISCOUNTS FOR CITY, GOV'T & SEPTA EMPLOYEES

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1



Ducks (37-10-5)

The most impressive streak in the NHL this season came to an end Tuesday as the Jets beat the Ducks, 3-2, at the Honda Center, handing Anaheim its first loss in regulation at home (20-1-2). The Ducks are sure to get over it and, if anything, not having to talk about it is probably a good thing moving forward.

No. 2

Blackhawks (32-8-11)

Chicago won its first Stanley Cup rematch with Boston in a shootout. Corey Crawford was the third star of the week in the NHL.

No. 3

Blues (33-11-5)

The Blues have slowed down a little bit but they are still only four points back of Chicago with two games in hand.

No. 4

Penguins (34-13-2)

Speaking of unexpected results, the Penguins fell to the Panthers Monday, snapping a 13-game home win streak.

No. 5

Sharks (32-12-6)

Very quietly, the Sharks are putting together another great regular season and they are in good position for home ice advantage.

No. 6

Avalanche (31-13-5)

The Avalanche are coming off one of their worst games of the season, a 5-2 loss to Toronto on Tuesday. Colorado is 7-2-1 in its last 10 games.

No. 7

Bruins (31-15-3)

Boston is enjoying its final extended rest between games before the Olympics. They are in Philadelphia on Saturday.

No. 8

Lightning (29-16-5)

With Detroit goaltender Jimmy Howard's knee injury, Tampa Bay goaltender Ben Bishop should leave his phone on until Feb. 11.

No. 9

Kings (29-16-6)

LA has lost its last two games and it is 4-4-2 in its last 10. Things won't get any easier as the Kings play two this week vs. Anaheim.

No. 10

Canucks (26-16-9)

Henrik Sedin's ironman streak (679 games) is over as he missed Tuesday night's game in Edmonton (2-1 Canucks win).

No. 11

Canadiens (28-14-5)

Montreal has treaded water lately, going 4-4-2 in its last 10 games. They have only scored 126 goals and their goal differential is a meager minus-6.

No. 12

Leafs (27-20-5)

Don't look now but the Maple Leafs are one of the hottest teams in the NHL with six straight wins.

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN.

CHANGES ARE IN THE AIR

Black Monday in the NFL has nothing to do with shopping, the stock market or poker. Coaching heads have rolled and the dust is settling.

Unlike other sports, coaches have a huge role on projected statistical production in the NFL. Scheming and coaching philosophy mean nearly as much as natural ability. Think about what Josh McCown did under quarterback whisperer Marc Trestman this season, or how bad Darren McFadden has been since Hue Jackson left Oakland.

If you were excited about Gio Bernard before, just wait until Hue Jackson is in charge. / GETTY IMAGES

Go-go Gio

Gio Bernard was already going to be a sophomore breakout candidate in 2014 as he's clearly the superior back to BenJarvus Green-Ellis. But now pass-happy offensive coordinator Jay Gruden is gone and running-back savant Hue Jackson is in. He's already talking up Bernard as a potential three-down and goal-line back. Jackson previously made fantasy stars of McFadden and Stephen Davis (with the Redskins from 2001-02).

Air Jordan

Jordan Cameron was a no-brainer sleeper in 2013 thanks to the arrival of tight end guru Rob Chudzinski. He responded with seven touchdowns. He's talented enough to sustain Top-10 value even with a new coach in place (eventually), but the monster upside leaves with the coaching regime.

MLB news

Matt Kemp played in just 73 games in 2013 as he battled injuries. Thinking of him as a bounce-back candidate? It's risky.

Planet Alf

Don't make the mistake of thinking Alfred Morris is a fluke because he went to Florida Atlantic and was a sixth-round draft pick. But it would also be an error to brush off the Mike Shanahan zone-blocking run scheme as a major factor in his success over the last two years. From Terrell Davis to Olandis Gary to Mike Anderson, we know Shanahan is committed to the run and knows how to create lanes. With Gruden now in as head coach and offensive guru, expect a scheme focused more on the pass.

NBA pickups

Time to scour the waiver wire for these lead guards:

- Ramon Sessions, PG, Bobcats — Kemba Walker's ankle injury clears the way for Sessions, an annual plug-and-play.
- Patrick Beverley, PG, Rockets — One of our favorite preseason sleepers is back and starting ahead of Jeremy Lin again.
